

Telemarketing has become a huge means of increasing sales for commercial businesses. It also lines the pockets of telephone companies and thereby costs the consumers money who have to buy equipment to keep from being annoyed by these telemarketing pests who invariably call at meal time, while you are taking a nap, in the bathroom, or on a long distance call. In addition, they do not know how to take "NO" for an answer and will call back even when you have asked to have your name and number removed from their lists. As a senior citizen, I would appreciate any help in stopping telemarketers from calling people's homes....but especially mine!
